Where Canada Should Emulate Britain

In a recent article in this column the opinion was expressed that during 1921 the people of Canada should vigorously attack the problem of debt reduction, and that the effort should include all Governments and individuals. Many people, have learned by bitter experience just how great a millions around their necks is a burden of debt. The resulting worry has undermined their health, handicapped their efforts, and made otherwise assured progress impossible. And what can individuals do? It is equally true of governments and nations! If people would not run up debts,

The imperative necessity of boldly facing and tackling the problem of debt reduction in Canada is emphasized by a recent newspaper despatch from Ottawa giving Canada's net debt in December 31 last as $2,611,338,100, an increase during the year of $2,641,340. That is to say, five years after the close of the war, Canada's national debt, instead of being reduced, is still increasing.

It is a favorite excuse for present heavy taxation that we are paying for the war, and that when so many thousands paid with their lives and in crippled bodies and impaired health, we should not object to paying with our dollars. But the truth is that we are not even paying our peace contribution, to say nothing of the cost of the war. We are, however, anxious to pay for the war. But how can it be done with a still increasing debt five years after the war? True, we are paying over one hundred millions a year interest on the war debt and some tens of millions more annually in pensions and re-establishment of soldiers, and to that extent are paying for the war. But this is not enough, because the national burden is not being reduced, but is being carried on indefinitely into the future.

In other words, despite our heavy taxation, we are not paying one cent towards reduction of the war debt. On the contrary, further increases in the debt only prove that we are not even paying our peace contribution, and that we are not even paying for the war. This is a real obstacle to further development and industrial expansion which the Dominion so badly needs. Not additional taxation, therefore, but drastic reduction in expenditures is called for.

Concerning what Canada is doing with what has already been accomplished in Great Britain, it is well to recall that first year after the war, Great Britain's revenue amounted to $1,352,000,000, while expenditures totalled $1,665,000. Four years later, 1922-23, the revenue was $2,914,000,000 and expenditures $2,120,000,000. That is to say, in four years Britain's revenue declined about one-third, due in part to lowering of taxation, but expenditures was cut down by half, a very striking accomplishment. The Britain is not satisfied and thus continues to be in debt.

The United States is likewise steadily reducing its war debt and is now contemplating important reductions in taxation.

It is high time Canada followed the example of these other English-speaking countries. It has been argued in defence of the new six per cent tax that went into effect January 1, 1923, that it will not pay for the war. If this is true, then why not set aside the proceeds of this tax for special debt redemption fund and not absorb it into the general revenues of the Dominion? It would be paid much more cheerfully if the people of Canada could see how effectively it affects year by year in a reduction of the principal amount of their national debt.

In preparing the estimates annually, the Finance Minister always includes an amount to cover interest charges on the national debt. The payment of such interest is a first charge on the revenues of the Dominion. In this manner, it would seem advisable to include a fairly substantial amount in the annual estimates for the payment of interest on the national debt, and to put that amount off without any failure. Such annual payments on principal would operate to reduce interest charges, and as interest payments were reduced the amount paid annually on principal could also be increased, thus reducing the debt at an ever-increasing rate.

In order to make this possible, certain national expenditures should be vigorously attacked and reduced to a point where these payments on debt account could be made. Only when Canada adopts some such method can it truthfully be said that we are at last paying for the war. Until such a policy is adopted, and strictly adhered to, Canada is not getting anywhere; the Dominion is not even "marking time," but is getting a little deeper into debt every year.

Valuable Find of Old Church Glass

Glass Dating From Middle of Fifteenth Century Discovered in Ancient Abbey

A very valuable discovery of early church glass, dating probably from the middle of the 15th century, has been made in Sherborne Abbey. During the "restoration" in 1838 a quantity of the old glass was removed from the windows and deposited in a box in the sacristy. The box was brought to the notice of Mr. F. G. Eales, of the Victoria and Albert Museum, who recently visited the abbey, with the result that it was sent to the museum, where the contents were examined.

Included in the glass are the remains of figures of several of the Prophets, and there is also a quantity of heraldic glass.

About £40 is required to ensure that the value of this glass may be restored to the abbey.

Divorce Made Easy

When a Shadow May Wreck a Married Life

For some time it has been the custom to begin divorce cases in the United States as a means of dissolving marriages that have turned out badly than those of any other country. But Germany has now taken the lead. The German law, in the interest of the mark and the occupancy of the Ruhr, the German judges have found time to set a new standard and create a new form of divorce. A Berlin engineer sued for a divorce from his wife on the ground that she habitually flirted with a male ghost and "thought more of spiritual things than of her husband." The court, in consequence of her attitude, uprooted her in overhast, and gave her a decree of the mark and the occupancy of the Ruhr. KEEP LITTLE ONES WELL IN WINTER

Out of Every Three Persons Living in London One is Country-Born

Somebody has been investigating the life-spans of the people in London, and the results show that one out of every three persons now living in London, that is, one country-born, that is, one country-born, is about a million and a half of the city's population are now dead. About one-half of these are in the country, and the others in the provinces of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, and Surrey. Kent having sent up 20,693 and Surrey 27,790 persons. There is a general impression that these are the most populous areas in the country, but the figures do not bear out this. London has only 50,000 Scots, as against 54,000 Irish. All the British dominions overseas have contributed together about 32,000 people; and about three per cent of those who live in the metropolis are foreigners.

Distinguishing the Contingents

A British war correspondent was attached to the Chinese army during a struggle with Peiping.

On one occasion he complained to a general that owing to his absence of uniform he could not be told in which army he was serving.

"Oh, it's quite simple," returned the general, cynically. "If you see a man running towards China he's a Chinaman; if he's running towards Peru, he's a Peruvian!" —T.R.B.

43 LIVES LOST WITH SINKING OF SUBMARINE L-24

Weymouth, Eng.—The British submarine L-24 was sent to the bottom of the sea by the dreadnought Resolute, with which she was in collision. The disaster, which occurred off Portland, was similar to the one which happened two years ago when the K-7 was sunk.

So far as is known, all on board the L-24, numbering 43, perished. Details are not yet available.

It seems that the Atlantic fleet was leaving Weymouth in various groups, including several submarines, for the spring training cruises, when the Resolute, based at the Royal Sovereign class, rammed the L-24, which was a mine-laying vessel, and had 14 life mines aboard. The accident occurred in a fog, when the vessel had opened out in the channel.

Another submarine accident occurred when a collision attack on the fleet was being carried out by submarines from Portland, Portsmouth and Plymouth. The L-24 sank immediately and the remaining vessels hurried to the spot and the area was searched by the mine-clearing flotilla, no trace of the ill-fated vessel was found.

"Do you think I ventured that Jean's depth of character would perhaps be wasted if she were to marry someone whom she would never love?"

Mrs. Mowbray looked at me sharply, the little brown woman of a woman that she is.

"You've hit it exactly," she admitted. "Jean has been mothering young the last year or two, trying to make things all her life, and that is where Jim goes—but and I wouldn't mind saying he goes because he is a good boy. I'm afraid of that she'll get fond of him and then feel badly when he leaves."

"Jim is quite a bit older than Jean, and he is neither weak nor sick," I observed.

"Yes, I know. But he is a good boy."

"Mrs. Mowbray does not seem to have any objection to Jim," I said.

She said, "But that tongue of his! He talks a quiet man every time."

"Mrs. Mowbray does not seem to have any objection to Jim," I said.

Repeating this, I continued the conversation to him.

But I, while I doubted Mrs. Mowbray's judgment, could not doubt my mother's. I think that she had Jean's welfare at heart was obvious, but I could not help thinking that her opinion to herself and I wouldn't openly express distrust of Jim prepared Jean for the worst.

Jim, however, was much the same. But Mr. Bonas had a way of reaching all sorts of people, even men, and though not all went to the meetings that were held each Sunday in the Spruce Creek hall, he did his best to get terms with "the Padre," even to the Catholic Gaugons and the Budds, who were not members of the church. They were glad to see his backslain pony turn in at the gate.

May brought in a new friend, Mr. Blomquist, a kind missionary who worked so hard to bring together those unchristianized parts of the district. His wife, a pink and vivacious girl, was a credit. In the village there were few Protestants, one Methodist, two Anglicans, several Lutherans, a German Catholic, one Buddhist and two Taoists. Jim, however, was much the same. "Two-thirds of the people in the district don't know how to turn to meet such a situation," he said. "And me and one day."

"I am not going to hold that heart to ask them for anything. In fact, I am going to hold that heart to give them some help instead of begging from them."

On the following Sunday, Murray returned to the subject as we drove home after church. The school had been closed for three days, he said, having driven in a long distance, having to wait for the postman to present, and we had eaten dinner at the home of a widow in Seven-Day sermon—a simple, helpful, heart-to-heart talk that gave encouragement to hold throughout the week.

"What are you going to build that church?" said Murray suddenly.

"But how can we?" I asked. "No one has any money."

"No, but we have time our materials, aren't we?" Murray interrupted. "I will suggest to the people that they can build its own church. I don't know why we shouldn't."

Everything in Nature seems to have

The birds twittering in the trees always seem to be chirping happily. The flowers become the green lawn breathe out a fragrance that makes you so glad. The sun is so glorious and scatters its rays so brightly. I think if you could hear the birds sing, you would not mind hearing it saying, 'Oh, I am so thankful that I have been born again.'
